

GREAT CROWDS SAW CARNIVAL

TWO SPLENDID PERFORMANCES SATURDAY.

Madame Timberman-Randolph Was Super in "He Solo from Gounod's "Sappho"—T. R. Williams and Miss Spenser Aroused Great Enthusiasm by Their Rendition of the Number from "Il Trovatore," "Lohengrin Scene Was Splendidly Done—Tonight's Programme.

Week is here, and to show our appreciation of your generous patronage we will, beginning today and throughout the week, give to everybody who comes to see a Thanksgiving Day PRODUCTION of "FAIRY'S MAGIC" instead of charge. Better come early while the seatings are large.

Don't forget we are headquarters for Pictures, Frames, etc for the holiday trade.

Jacobs & Fasold,
200 WASHINGTON AVENUE.

City Notes.

D. L. A. W. PAYS. The employees of the big mining, diamond, whiskey and stores still will be paid today.

CHANGES IN D. & H. TIME-TABLE. Important changes in the Delaware and Hudson timetable go into effect today. Passengers should obtain new time tables from local agents.

TO BE OPENED TODAY.—The next freight depot of the Delaware and Hudson railroad, located near the passenger station, will be opened for business today. The old depot on Bridge street will be closed.

DEATH AT HILLSIDE HOME.—Stephen Peacock, aged 70, died yesterday at the Hillside Home of Hockessin. He has been there since Sept. 21, the day his wife and several children, who are supposed to live on Hockessin street in this city.

60 TRAIN DELAYED.—The Lackawanna train which leaves this city at 6:10 p.m. for Buffalo was delayed over two hours last night by a week at Morris Plains, on the Morris and Essex division. It did not leave until 9 o'clock.

MICHAEL BISSETT IN BED.—Michael Bisset, a workman employed in the Green Ridge Iron works, had his left hand crushed on Saturday by being caught in the machinery at the works. His injury was directed at the Lackawanna hospital.

FOR WICKENBY FUNERAL.—The following contributions for the McKelvey memorial fund were received Saturday: General Wenzel, $1; Guy A. Wenzel, $1; Gilbert E. Wenzel, $1; Mrs. General Wenzel, $1; Miss Emma Wenzel, $1; Mrs. Herman Schmidt, $1.

MACHINIST SENT TO JAHN.—Charles Koen, of Scranton City, employed as a machinist by the Senator Rathbun company, was committed to the county jail on Saturday by Magistrate Miller on a charge of larceny, perpetrated by Master electrician Muller, who claims to have found a complete set of stolen tools in Koen's pocket.

WICKER'S CLEARINGS.—The clearings for last week, as reported by the Scranton Clearing House association, were as follows: Monday, $27,000.24; Tuesday, $28,626.03; Wednesday, $24,551.96; Thursday, $26,997.00; Friday, $27,765.01; Saturday, $26,215.15; total, $137,253.60. Corresponding week last year, $109,859.72.

TO DISCUSS BOY OUTING.—A special meeting of the board of trade is to be held at noon today to hear and take action on a report to be presented by the committee to which was referred the matter of suggesting some plan to break up the boy's day and prevent the results of the street railway strike. The committee met Friday afternoon and agreed upon a plan of action, an outline of which will be submitted at today's meeting. Luncheon will be served following the meeting.

COMING ENTERTAINMENT.—Miss Beatrice Hedges, who will be married to Dr. George D. Moore, pastor of the Young Ladies' Society of the First Presbyterian church, is undoubtedly the most celebrated monologist of the day. She is unpassed in every line of oratorical skill and will be heard with great interest. The monologues include clever sketches of the hotel guests, the steamship, the traveler in a railway train, etc. A feature of the entertainment will be songs by Mr. Harry H. Brady, arr. and Mr. Ralph Williams.

FOR THANKSGIVING DINNER.—Yesterday being unpleasant, the congregation at St. Paul's was smaller than usual, and it is noted that people may forget to send their annual contribution to the church. The amount given last year was $1,000. The committee with twelve donations at the door of the parish home all day Tuesday, it should be remembered that a contribution which beauty has been uniting and making for several years will be missed this season. The Services have no date here this Thanksgiving day and a very large gift is thus withdrawn.

INSPECTED HILLSIDE HOME.

Secretary Biddle, of Public Charities Board, Looked It Over.

Hon. Cadwallader Biddle, of Philadelphia, general agent and secretary of the board of public charities, visited the Hillsdale Home unexpectedly on Saturday and made a general inspection of the institution.

He spent an hour and a half looking over the place, and expressed himself as being highly pleased with the cleanliness and good management visible on every hand.

"The institution compares favorably with the best in the state," said he. Secretary Biddle always makes these inspections unheralded, that he may see things as they are at all times and not as they might appear fixed up for visitors.

Son Born to the Vanderbilts.

By Exclusive Wire from The Associated Press
New York, Nov. 24.—A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Gaynor Vanderbilt, tonight.

BOND OFFERINGS.
Spring Brook Water, 1st Mtg. 5s.
Lacka. Valley Elec. Light, 1st Mtg. 5s.
North Jersey and Pocono Mountain Ice Co., 1st Mtg. 5s.
Standard Gas Co., 1st Mtg. 5s.
Lehighton Water Supply Co., 1st Mtg. 5s.
New Mexico Railway and Coal Co., 1st Mtg. 5s.
Descriptive and price on application.

GOSSIP OF THE GUARD

HIGHEST SCORES MADE AT RIFLE PRACTICE.

Private Fred Van Buren Leads the Regiment with a Score of 72—Sergeant C. L. Van Scoten of Monroe, a Close Second—Rifle Range to Be Fitted Up in New Armory. Interest in the Proposed Athletic Association Is Growing—Company B to Give a Ball.

better class of soldiers is produced if they are fostered.

The question of taking company L of Easton, from the Thirteenth regiment and joining it with the Fourth regiment, is again being agitated in military circles. The State Army and Navy Journal, for this month, contains a brief editorial, in which it is pointed out that Company L would get the advantages of battalion drill now and then if joined to the Fourth, an advantage which its members do not now enjoy.

A military ball will be given in Music Hall on Thanksgiving night by Company B. A committee headed by Captain Karsbeck has charge of the arrangements.

The Only Opportunity

First Lieutenant Lewis P. Carter, instructor of rifle practice, has just completed a compilation of the scores made by the various members of the regiment during the season for rifle practice recently ended. The best score made in actual qualification was made by Private Fred Van Buren, of Monroe, a close competitor with the individual whose owner who has to do does pay the amount of money demanded by the company, as well as the city of Scranton, from which it obtained its funds. I ask those questions for the purpose that you may be enlightened on this delicate subject. Against whom can one go? The damages, the city of Scranton, the state supply company or my landlord, either, however, must say has done his best to remedy the trouble, but without success?

Another, and I think also a credit one, is from a sanitary and also a civic point of view. The president of the public school board of health and the director of public health under whose superintendence I suppose the building project, allow dwellings and other buildings to be erected and occupied which have but one chimney, and that not the firebrick range, and even allow a cluster of six, three separate and distinct buildings to have but one chimney so that, in case of a fire, the buildings become unsanitary and uninhabitable during the greater part of the year, or until the defect in the supply of heat is repaired, because there is no possible means of heating the building by stoves or even grate fires.

—Capt. Soller, M. D., 23rd Inf. Regt.,
Rev. M. D. [unclear]

A THANKSGIVING SERMON

Helpful Address Delivered by Rev. Dr. C. M. Giffin in Elm Park Church.

Rev. Dr. C. M. Giffin, pastor of the Elm Park Methodist Episcopal church, preached a delightful little Thanksgiving sermon at a special praise service conducted last night. Prior to the sermon, special music was rendered by the quartette, the most enjoyable number being a duet by Alfred Woold and Philip Warren.

Dr. Giffin started out by explaining that Thanksgiving is a testing time when a man's true inner soul is revealed. The optimist sees everything to be thankful for, the pessimist nothing.

"The trouble with the pessimist," said he, "is that he fails to realize the value of trifles. Trifling affairs and events may not mean much in themselves, but they form a part of the great entirety of life, which is a trifle."

The pessimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His thoughts, he explained, is too often taken up with brooding on one particular affliction of the last few months which he can never see anything else.

"The optimist," he continued, "comes smiling on Thanksgiving Day and says with face aglow, 'I do believe that God is alive and in His world.' Would that we were all optimists and that we might realize that there is always a bright side if we choose to look for it."

The optimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His thoughts, he explained, is too often taken up with brooding on one particular affliction of the last few months which he can never see anything else.

"The optimist," he continued, "comes smiling on Thanksgiving Day and says with face aglow, 'I do believe that God is alive and in His world.' Would that we were all optimists and that we might realize that there is always a bright side if we choose to look for it."

The optimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His thoughts, he explained, is too often taken up with brooding on one particular affliction of the last few months which he can never see anything else.

"The optimist," he continued, "comes smiling on Thanksgiving Day and says with face aglow, 'I do believe that God is alive and in His world.' Would that we were all optimists and that we might realize that there is always a bright side if we choose to look for it."

The optimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His thoughts, he explained, is too often taken up with brooding on one particular affliction of the last few months which he can never see anything else.

"The optimist," he continued, "comes smiling on Thanksgiving Day and says with face aglow, 'I do believe that God is alive and in His world.' Would that we were all optimists and that we might realize that there is always a bright side if we choose to look for it."

The optimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His thoughts, he explained, is too often taken up with brooding on one particular affliction of the last few months which he can never see anything else.

"The optimist," he continued, "comes smiling on Thanksgiving Day and says with face aglow, 'I do believe that God is alive and in His world.' Would that we were all optimists and that we might realize that there is always a bright side if we choose to look for it."

The optimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His thoughts, he explained, is too often taken up with brooding on one particular affliction of the last few months which he can never see anything else.

"The optimist," he continued, "comes smiling on Thanksgiving Day and says with face aglow, 'I do believe that God is alive and in His world.' Would that we were all optimists and that we might realize that there is always a bright side if we choose to look for it."

The optimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His thoughts, he explained, is too often taken up with brooding on one particular affliction of the last few months which he can never see anything else.

"The optimist," he continued, "comes smiling on Thanksgiving Day and says with face aglow, 'I do believe that God is alive and in His world.' Would that we were all optimists and that we might realize that there is always a bright side if we choose to look for it."

The optimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His thoughts, he explained, is too often taken up with brooding on one particular affliction of the last few months which he can never see anything else.

"The optimist," he continued, "comes smiling on Thanksgiving Day and says with face aglow, 'I do believe that God is alive and in His world.' Would that we were all optimists and that we might realize that there is always a bright side if we choose to look for it."

The optimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His thoughts, he explained, is too often taken up with brooding on one particular affliction of the last few months which he can never see anything else.

"The optimist," he continued, "comes smiling on Thanksgiving Day and says with face aglow, 'I do believe that God is alive and in His world.' Would that we were all optimists and that we might realize that there is always a bright side if we choose to look for it."

The optimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His thoughts, he explained, is too often taken up with brooding on one particular affliction of the last few months which he can never see anything else.

"The optimist," he continued, "comes smiling on Thanksgiving Day and says with face aglow, 'I do believe that God is alive and in His world.' Would that we were all optimists and that we might realize that there is always a bright side if we choose to look for it."

The optimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His thoughts, he explained, is too often taken up with brooding on one particular affliction of the last few months which he can never see anything else.

"The optimist," he continued, "comes smiling on Thanksgiving Day and says with face aglow, 'I do believe that God is alive and in His world.' Would that we were all optimists and that we might realize that there is always a bright side if we choose to look for it."

The optimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His thoughts, he explained, is too often taken up with brooding on one particular affliction of the last few months which he can never see anything else.

"The optimist," he continued, "comes smiling on Thanksgiving Day and says with face aglow, 'I do believe that God is alive and in His world.' Would that we were all optimists and that we might realize that there is always a bright side if we choose to look for it."

The optimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His thoughts, he explained, is too often taken up with brooding on one particular affliction of the last few months which he can never see anything else.

"The optimist," he continued, "comes smiling on Thanksgiving Day and says with face aglow, 'I do believe that God is alive and in His world.' Would that we were all optimists and that we might realize that there is always a bright side if we choose to look for it."

The optimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His thoughts, he explained, is too often taken up with brooding on one particular affliction of the last few months which he can never see anything else.

"The optimist," he continued, "comes smiling on Thanksgiving Day and says with face aglow, 'I do believe that God is alive and in His world.' Would that we were all optimists and that we might realize that there is always a bright side if we choose to look for it."

The optimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His thoughts, he explained, is too often taken up with brooding on one particular affliction of the last few months which he can never see anything else.

"The optimist," he continued, "comes smiling on Thanksgiving Day and says with face aglow, 'I do believe that God is alive and in His world.' Would that we were all optimists and that we might realize that there is always a bright side if we choose to look for it."

The optimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His thoughts, he explained, is too often taken up with brooding on one particular affliction of the last few months which he can never see anything else.

"The optimist," he continued, "comes smiling on Thanksgiving Day and says with face aglow, 'I do believe that God is alive and in His world.' Would that we were all optimists and that we might realize that there is always a bright side if we choose to look for it."

The optimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His thoughts, he explained, is too often taken up with brooding on one particular affliction of the last few months which he can never see anything else.

"The optimist," he continued, "comes smiling on Thanksgiving Day and says with face aglow, 'I do believe that God is alive and in His world.' Would that we were all optimists and that we might realize that there is always a bright side if we choose to look for it."

The optimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His thoughts, he explained, is too often taken up with brooding on one particular affliction of the last few months which he can never see anything else.

"The optimist," he continued, "comes smiling on Thanksgiving Day and says with face aglow, 'I do believe that God is alive and in His world.' Would that we were all optimists and that we might realize that there is always a bright side if we choose to look for it."

The optimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His thoughts, he explained, is too often taken up with brooding on one particular affliction of the last few months which he can never see anything else.

"The optimist," he continued, "comes smiling on Thanksgiving Day and says with face aglow, 'I do believe that God is alive and in His world.' Would that we were all optimists and that we might realize that there is always a bright side if we choose to look for it."

The optimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His thoughts, he explained, is too often taken up with brooding on one particular affliction of the last few months which he can never see anything else.

"The optimist," he continued, "comes smiling on Thanksgiving Day and says with face aglow, 'I do believe that God is alive and in His world.' Would that we were all optimists and that we might realize that there is always a bright side if we choose to look for it."

The optimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His thoughts, he explained, is too often taken up with brooding on one particular affliction of the last few months which he can never see anything else.

"The optimist," he continued, "comes smiling on Thanksgiving Day and says with face aglow, 'I do believe that God is alive and in His world.' Would that we were all optimists and that we might realize that there is always a bright side if we choose to look for it."

The optimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His thoughts, he explained, is too often taken up with brooding on one particular affliction of the last few months which he can never see anything else.

"The optimist," he continued, "comes smiling on Thanksgiving Day and says with face aglow, 'I do believe that God is alive and in His world.' Would that we were all optimists and that we might realize that there is always a bright side if we choose to look for it."

The optimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His thoughts, he explained, is too often taken up with brooding on one particular affliction of the last few months which he can never see anything else.

"The optimist," he continued, "comes smiling on Thanksgiving Day and says with face aglow, 'I do believe that God is alive and in His world.' Would that we were all optimists and that we might realize that there is always a bright side if we choose to look for it."

The optimist, the doctor said, always takes a short view of events. His